“Without the Nurse Faculty Loan Program I would not have been able to achieve the goal of completing my DNAP while working full-time.”

- Michael Heck, CRNA

Founded in 1950, Middle Tennessee School of Anesthesia (MTSA) provides graduate-level education and training of nurse anesthetists in a Christian environment born of its Seventh-day Adventist heritage. MTSA is the only independent, fully accredited anesthesia institution of its kind in the nation, instilling excellence through innovative and diverse clinical experience. A leader in academic, clinical and professional distinction, MTSA is responsive to the needs of its constituents, providing affordable graduate education for students from diverse backgrounds. The campus is located in Madison, Tennessee, a suburb of Nashville.

Administrators, Educators, and Future Faculty

MTSA's Nurse Educator Track Program adheres to accreditation standards for Nurse Anesthesia faculty, offering formal instruction in curriculum, evaluation, and hands-on experience. It fosters faculty growth in education, providing mentorship from industry leaders in teaching instruction, curriculum development, administrative leadership roles, effective clinical teaching, clinical coordination, and beyond. Exclusively tailored for Nurse Anesthetists, this program equips faculty to:

- Meet or exceed professional standards in education
- Engage students during coursework and simulation
- Write quality exam questions
- Participate in program evaluation
- Advance as an educator through Program Administrator
- Serve as mentors for new and future faculty
- Gain the coursework to be eligible for the Certified Nurse Educator Exam

"I chose MTSA's DNAP Completion Program with the Nurse Educator track to gain the skills and credentials desired by anesthesia program accreditors to educate the next generation of nurses and CRNAs."
